Results and Outlook

So far there is not much pattern to which badge workshops fill and which do not. We've looked at potential reasons like the day of the week workshops are offered (Saturdays, Wednesdays), whether scout awards were given during the workshop or not, and whether or not scouts want to complete certain awards on their own or with their group. Securing classroom space is often an issue on campus during busy seasons as well (spring, fall).

Volunteer Contributions:

- Badge Workshops helped to increase overall participation numbers and revenue in 2014.
- Even though we are down to 8 volunteers, the addition of badge workshops allows the Scout instructor to teach group programs while the workshops are taking place.
- Having volunteers at overnight experiences helps to increase our capacity to do more engaging activities during the program including guided hikes and crafts.
- Initial results from the Volunteer pre-survey show that our volunteers feel somewhat comfortable in their role. Our hope is that by the end of the year when they receive the survey they will have gained confidence with practice and support from MBG staff. We hope their affinity for giving, following, and Scout Programs will only grow with time.

In a certain sense they were the precursor of the concept of the botanical exhibitions which the Garden team developed and implemented over the last decade. The success recipe for these "multi-dimensional sensory experiences" was a mixture of interactivity, education in a fun way, aesthetics and presentation in three languages.

Botanic gardens are important centres for education. Nanjing Botanic Garden (NBG), the first national botanic garden in China, puts emphasis on environmental education since the late 1990s. The environmental education programme of NBG have been carried out in various ways. Scientific guides, exhibitions, lectures, training courses, popular science books as well as materials have been provided; various activities including summer camp have been organized. A summer camp called 'Journey of Plant Kingdom' held in last few years is introduced in details in this paper.
