

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN

65th Annual Fall Symposium

October 12-13, 2018

St. Louis, Missouri

Biota of North America: what we know, what we don't know and what we're losing

Systematics meets ecology, paleontology and genomics at the crossroads of Beringia - the Flora of Alaska
Steffi Ickert-Bond, Ph.D.
University of Alaska,
Fairbanks, AK

Sensitivity of North American freshwater systems to changes in climate
Jason Knouft, Ph.D.
Saint Louis University,
St. Louis, MO

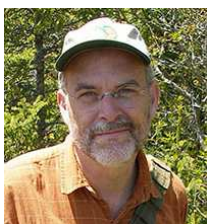

Diversity and diversification of the North American oaks
Andrew Hipp, Ph.D.
The Morton Arboretum,
Lisle, IL

Fine-scale to flora-wide phylogenetic perspectives on Californian plant diversity, endemism, and conservation
Bruce Baldwin, Ph.D.
Jepson Herbarium,
University of California -Berkeley, CA

The Anthropocene: Human-caused threats to native plants and how humans can tip the balance to restore them
Jennifer Lau, Ph.D.
Indiana University
Bloomington, IN

The unsung heroes and villains of the night – nocturnal pollination and herbivory in the evening primrose family, Onagraceae
Krissa Skogen, Ph.D.
Chicago Botanic Garden,
Chicago, IL

The rich and diverse flora of the unglaciated southeastern United States – What we still don't know and why it matters
Alan Weakley, Ph.D.
University of North Carolina Herbarium
Chapel Hill, NC

The National Biodiversity Information System of Mexico. Cooperation and applications
Jorge Soberón, Ph.D.
University of Kansas,
Lawrence, KS

Register at www.mobot.org/symposium

Graduate students are eligible to apply for the 2018 Delzie Demaree Travel Award for a $250 stipend to defray expenses to attend the Symposium; please see www.mobot.org/symposium for details.

POSTERS! Posters may be submitted for presentation during the Symposium. See details at www.mobot.org/symposium. Deadline for submission: 30 September 2018.

Organized by: Monica Carlsen, Aaron Floden, Peter Hoch, and James Miller