The screenshot shows the website for the Hammons School of Architecture at Drury University. The header features the university's name and logo, along with navigation links for Admission, Academics, Life @ Drury, Alumni, Athletics, and Parents & Visitors. A search bar is also present. The main banner image depicts students working in a studio. Below the banner, the page is organized into three columns. The left column contains a 'Program Overview' section with links to various program details. The middle column features a 'Director's Message' titled 'The Drury Model', which discusses the school's commitment to architectural education. The right column includes a 'Contact' section for the school's director and a 'News' section with recent articles about grant approvals and sustainability.

Director's Message

The Drury Model

At Drury Architecture we are committed to offering the best possible educational experience on the path to becoming a professional architect. By viewing architecture more as a field of operation than as a pure discipline of speculation for its own sake, we re-interpret the real origin of the term "architect" (from the Ancient Greek, "builder-in-chief"). Choosing a professional perspective, rather than a disciplinary one, is not of lesser importance.
